

PHILIP ADIUTORI

DESIGN DIRECTOR + PARTNER

Leading VIDA's business development in Europe and the Mediterranean basin, Philip is a Landscape Architect who believes strongly in the proper management of our wild, urban and agricultural landscapes and to balancing society's needs with those of nature.

He also believes that the best work evolves through the formation of thoughtful, inter-disciplinary teams. Consequently, Philip's professional, global network allows him to assemble great project teams for his clients. His broad success is also due to the fact that he allows the design process to be reinterpreted anew for each project - there is no one-size-fits-all with Philip.

Wrapping up his Masters of Studies in Interdisciplinary Design for the Built Environment from the University of Cambridge, UK, Philip has focused his research on exploring alternative ways to visualize our landscapes to create new ways of perceiving our environment, while also improving the democratic process of land-use planning.

Raised in Northwest Pennsylvania, and having lived in Los Angeles, Rome, Fort Lauderdale, Siena, Prague and now settling in Florence, Italy his sense of culture is continuously expanding and plays an important role in the evolution of his distinctive style.

Prior to joining the VIDA team, Philip was a partner at the boutique landscape architecture and planning studio, FormaTerra, based out of Florence, Italy. Previously, Philip worked with EDSA Los Angeles for over 5 years where he managed large hospitality projects and assumed a primary role in educating the firm on sustainable design principles.

In his spare time, Philip takes lots of photographs, draws, snowboards, surfs or lounges al'fresco at a cafe with friends and family.
